Foreword

It is my great pleasure to introduce our activities on International Co-operative Alliance Regional Women's Committee for Asia and Pacific (ICA-AP RWC) to co-operators worldwide and fellow colleagues in the pacific region. Gender Equality is a very common issue with some similar challenges on this topic in almost every country.

Under the present economic depression little attention is paid on gender equality issues resulting in more difficult situation for women. We now therefore, need more energy to focus on the promotion of gender equality.

Women in the Asia-Pacific region and especially those in the rural areas tend to be modest and humble.

Many countries in the Asia-Pacific region are promoting gender equality programs into the mainstream of the society.

Our committee meeting was honored to receive participation of two vice-presidents, Ms. Emma Nieva from the Philippines and Ms. Kruewan Chonlanai from Thailand in 2009 and 2010 respectively. Their participation had a significant impact on discussions held.

ICA Regional Women's Forum was held in Vietnam and Beijing in 2008 and 2010 respectively where best practices were presented. During these meeting we shared the activity examples of Vietnam, Philippines, Malaysia, Korea, Iran, Pakistan, Thailand and Japan.

We had the opportunity to visit women's co-operatives during the regional women's committee meeting in the Philippines in 2009 and noticed the dramatic achievements they have made. We realized that the co-operative movement is raising women's position in the society.

Gender equality in the Asia Pacific is moving ahead steadily.
Let's keep moving forward.

With Co-operative greeting,

Hitomi Tanaka

Chairperson, ICA-Asia and Pacific RWC

Message from the Regional Director

I have pleasure in presenting this report to all the stake holders. The ICA is committed to achieving gender mainstreaming in co-operatives in the region. We have set up strong mechanism in the form of Regional Women's Committee to help achieve the goal. The Women's Committee is one of the pro-active committees of ICA-AP and has been implementing a number of capacity building programmes for the members, institutions and for the community as well.

The lobbying and advocacy programmes in the form of women committee meetings, regional women forums and exposure visits have been impacting the thinking process of the fraternity towards gender balance. Due to the consistent endeavour of the gender programmes of the ICA-AP, a number of member organisations have created women department or women/ gender committees in their respective offices. The co-operatives around the region have shown remarkable support to ICA-AP gender programmes by hosting such programmes and by sending participants to attend such programmes.

Women are visible in co-operatives at primary levels as members but the leadership and senior management positions are still to be taken over. The age old socio-economic-religious-cultural circle has imprisoned women in many countries and isolated approach by co-operatives is not enough to create tangible impact. Therefore, an inclusive strategy is needed to address the situation. The co-operatives should partner with governments and UN agencies for clubbing resources. The co-operative law is one of the most important tool which should be re-written to help expedite women's participation in agricultural and other co-operatives.

I appreciate the efforts of the IC-AP Regional Women's Committee for their commendable work and wish to see a gender balanced co-operative movement.

Dr. Chan Ho CHOI
Regional Director

Introduction

Since the inception of the ICA Regional Women's Committee for Asia and Pacific in 1998, various activities are being conducted regularly to promote women empowerment for gender mainstreaming in co-operatives in the region. These activities are documented and a periodical Progress Report is being published by the office.

This 2008-2010 report is the fourth in series. During the period under report we reached out to thousands of members directly through capacity building programmes, lobbying, advocacy and networking efforts and through the direct beneficiaries of our capacity building programmes. Lobbying, advocacy and networking activities boost the influence on decision makers.

The visibility of women leaders improved slightly as there were 2 women CEO (NATCCO, Philippines, and SNCF, Singapore) took charge of the national Federations. However, the membership of the committee has not improved any bit and we have only 14 women members out of 71 member organizations in 25 countries. There is lack of interest in nomination to Women Committee due to other priorities.

However, gender mainstreaming programmes are widely accepted and promoted by members. We are thank full to our members and other stake holders for their continuous support in implementation of the activities. All our members generously host the programmes, send participants and provide logistics.

We invited international agencies such as UNDP, ILO, FAO and others and they got involved as resource persons to share experience and enrich knowledge of members for gender mainstreaming.

With co-operative solidarity, we shall continue with the endeavor and work towards achieving the goal of gender mainstreaming at all levels of co-operatives.

- | | | | | |
|----------|-------------|----------------|--------------|-------------|
| 1. India | 2. China | 3. Indonesia | 4. Iran | 5. Pakistan |
| 6. Japan | 7. Thailand | 8. Philippines | 9. Singapore | 10. Korea |

The programme of the forum was divided into 4 sessions

1. Registration and opening
2. Business session comprising of presentation by speakers
3. Group discussions
4. Closing which includes presentation of the reports of the group discussions and Forum's Resolution

The opening ceremony was facilitated by Ms. Savitri Singh, Advisor, Gender Programs of ICA- AP and Secretary of the ICA Regional Women's Committee for Asia-Pacific (RWC). She initiated the program by welcoming the participants. She gave a brief background of the ICA- AP initiatives on Gender mainstreaming in co-operatives and role of Regional Women's Committee. She also introduced the outline of the day's program to the participants. Thereafter, she invited Ms. Hitomin Tanaka, Chairperson of the ICA RWC to address the participants.

Ms. Tanaka is the Vice Chairperson of Japanese Consumer Co-operative Union and Vice Chairperson of ICA-AP Regional Board. She has vast experience of promoting women in consumer co-operatives in Japan. She extended a warm welcome to the participants and thanked them for attending the Forum. She spoke about the endeavor of the Regional Women's Committee for empowerment of women and gender mainstreaming in co-operatives in the region.

Dr. Chandra Pal Singh Yadav, Chairman of National Co-operative Union of India (NCUI) was invited to deliver the opening address. Dr. Yadav said that platforms like the women forum are very important for organizing stake holders and providing opportunity to discuss issue of equal participation of women and youth in social and economic activities.

Dr. Yadav delivered his opening address and declared the forum open.

Dr. Yadav, in his speech, said that I am privileged to get this opportunity to join you at this important conference. I appreciate the Women's Committee for choosing the very appropriate theme: "CO-OPERATIVES : THE SECTOR FOR EMPOWERMENT OF WOMEN and YOUTH". Women and youth are very important components of the society- women are the backbone and youth is the future. This is very true for co-operative sector as well. Almost 55% of food production is done by women in Asia as well as many other countries in the world. Majority of the co-operative members are related to agriculture.

Secondly, the co-operatives business needs young generation to gradually take over from the old so that new vision and methodology of young people can take co-operatives to new heights. I come from the National Co-operative Union of India (NCUI) which represents 240 million individuals co-operative members in the country, a large number of which are women.

NCUI and its member co-operatives in the country are proactive in empowering women for Gender Mainstreaming in co-operatives at the same time, various programmes are being implemented to increase Youth Participation in Co-operatives.

NCUI is implementing development projects exclusively for women in rural areas. Most of the states in the country have reserved quota for women at Boards of Co-operatives. NCUI is running several short and long term leadership and management capacity building programmes for women. The Youth education programmes are being implemented by the state-unions on a regular basis. Youth rallies, camps and debate competitions are organized throughout the year in various parts of the country.

The NCUI and the co-operative movement of India are committed to enhance women and youth participation in co-operatives. However, a lot has to be done to achieve our goals.

- The women committee of the NCUI recommends for 30% reservation for women at all levels of co-operatives.
- The committee also recommends that 33% of women membership should be prerequisite for registration of co-operative society.
- The committee also recommends that co-operative banks should provide education loans for students.
- Students/Campus co-operatives should be linked to main stream co-operatives to facilitate Joint purchase systems, business alliances and networking.
- Youth should be encouraged/ invited to participate in various co-operative activities, conferences, and workshops, etc.

These are some efforts we are making in India. I would be interested in knowing from other countries in the region. With these words I would like to congratulate the organizers for choosing a relevant theme and organizing such a wonderful forum.

Mr. Shil Kwan Lee, former Regional Director of ICA-AP presided over and chaired the session. He introduced the speakers and facilitated Question and Answer session.

Business session opened with Key note speech on the theme of the Forum.

Keynote speech on the theme " Co-operatives: The Sector for Empowerment of Women and Youth" was delivered by Ms. Mi-yea OH, Chairperson of iCOOP Goyang /President of Mutual Aid Society For Enhancing Korean Agriculture .

It is a mutual aid society established by the members of iCOOP KOREA to support local co-operatives and agricultural producers. Ms. OH started her address by reminding the participants, the message of this year's International Co-operative Day. It was "Co-operative Enterprise Empowers Women." At iCOOP KOREA, most of the leaders in 76 local co-operatives are women. And, of course, women are playing a crucial role also in representative and executive posts. She said that she believes this year's message bears a great significance for iCOOP KOREA, because its progress for the past decade is attributable to devotions and hard efforts made by the women leaders across the nation. On top of that, it was all the more encouraging to the women leaders of iCOOP KOREA when the first female president has been elected in the ICA General Assembly in 2009.

While concluding her speech, she talked about the tasks all co-operative members should take on together in order to enhance abilities and powers of women and the youth. She proposed following tasks to participants:

- To study and create a variety of co-operative business models where both women and the youth can participate. We have to show them that there are actually meaningful jobs other than jobs in private and public sectors to realize the alternative value and objective that co-operatives pursue. Co-operatives should be the good alternative for women and the youth for their better livelihoods and self-improvement. It is also essential for us to create jobs for the women and the youth who cannot take part in official economic activities for various reasons.
- However, we cannot draw interest and support from the public only by promoting values and social significances we pursue. Co-operative enterprises should at least secure the productivity level as high as the average business productivity level in the market. To this end, co-operatives should have more specialized strategy and management. In the consumer co-operatives led by women, in particular, education and training for women leadership and capacity building should be more strengthened.
- In addition, we should strive to promote the values and alternatives of co-operatives toward women and the youth. The public awareness on co-operatives is very low in Korea. As a result, the base of our co-operative members is not that broad. It is also very difficult to raise the business efficiency and secure management resources such as talented human resources and capitals due to our small business scale. Above all, the social support for co-operatives is weak. Just as it is stressed in the principles of co-operatives, we should spread out co-operative values to the public, the influential class and the youth.
- Lastly, I would like to highlight two things. First, it is imperative for us to take a closer look at the realities that each country's women and the youth are facing, and it is also important to come up with alternatives to promote co-operation and solidarity with marginalized women and the youth.

Ms. Hiroko Yamagishi, Vice Chairperson of Japanese Consumer Co-operative presented paper on the sub theme I:

“Women’s Livelihood and Leadership through Co-operatives” .

She presented her paper based on the activities of her co-operative in Cobe, Japan.

Mr. Ilham Nasai, Vice Chairperson of the ICA Regional Youth Committee delivered speech on the sub theme II: “ Socio- Economic Empowerment of Youth Through Co-operatives” .

Mr. Lee, Chair of the session initiated discussion on the equal participation of women in co-operatives, especially in agricultural co-operatives as the requirement of membership is ownership of land and most of the women do not own land. He cited the example of Korea where law is enacted to allow two members per family in order to provide opportunity to women. He invited Savitri Singh of ICA-AP to give more information on the issue. Ms. Dolly Goh, CEO of Singapore National Co-operative Federation (SNCF), Ms. Emma Neiva of NATCCO Network and other participants also shared their views.

Ms. Puline Green, President of ICA joined the forum for a short while and interacted with the participants. She emphasized the need of women empowerment and gender main streaming in co-operatives. She shared ICA vision on co-operatives as equal opportunity organizations and informed the participants about UN proclamation of co-operative year 2012 and it’s significance for co-operatives to emerge as a strong socio-economic sector.

Business session concluded with summing up of discussion by Mr. Shil Kwan Lee.

In the post lunch session, participants were divided into 2 groups one for women and one for youth. The topic for the discussion was:

“ Co-operative for Professional Development of Women and Youth” .

The members discussed the topic in detail and a report was presented by each group.

Report of the Women Group:

The women co-operators recommended the following:

The co-operative system can help professional development of women :

- By conducting sex disaggregated data for appropriate design of products and services for both women and men
- By conducting a need-based capacity building programs, i.e., Gender Sensitivity Training and creating awareness to change the stereo-type mindset, Leadership Training, Responsible Parenthood, Livelihood and the like.
- Working in tandem with the government, to reach out for information drive on various gender issues.
- By conducting regular forums participated by women delegates from ICA member countries for exchange of best practices.
- For ICA to recognize successful women, youth and other co-operative leaders by giving awards during ICA Assembly.

Report of the Youth Group :

The members of youth group agreed that there is a need to promote youth co-operatives professionally by co-operative organizations.

The group focused their discussion around certain KEY ISSUES:

- Unemployment
- Education (social illness)
- Environmental (climate change)
- As co-operatives cater to the people with limited needs and aspirations, students and youth in general, automatically qualify under this group.
- The idea of a co-operative press in the colleges and universities could help the young citizens of the world to be self sufficient and live independently.
- The Idea: As soon as the young students qualify into university, he or she is sou-moto inducted into the co-operatives wherein he or she becomes a member and contributes to the project.
- The co-operatives own newsletters and periodicals. One way of employment for youth could be writing/ contributing articles, reports etc. for the periodical.
For example, sports, debates, academics and research on relevant issues.
- Economic Aspect
- The Newspaper could carry advertisement material of various co-operative enterprises in the world. This will give the Co-operatives much needed publicity, especially with the International Year of Co-operatives only a year away. The Newspaper too would be able to earn its costs with such advertisements and promotional material.

Recommendations of the Youth group:

- The co-operatives are suitable organization for young students who have limited resources as co-operatives can provide part-time employment along with education.
- A system of employment to entice the youth to get involved in the agriculture activities.
- More information / publicity about co-operatives for awareness in general public.
- Home-based work for women (with child and home care) and entrepreneurship / self employment for youth.
- All the student in university should join co-operative and contribute to co-operative activities.
- The students should be encouraged to write on various topics in co-operative newsletters and periodical. This may be a part-time employment for them.

The Chair Person of the ICA RWC presented these resolutions of the women forum at the ICA Regional Assembly to be adopted by the ICA.

Recommendation to Regional Assembly -2010:

The co-operatives can provide professional development for women by:

- Conducting survey to assess needs of women and design need-based products and services.
- Conducting need-based capacity building programs such as training of co-operative members on gender sensitivity to change the stereo-type mindset, leadership skills, responsible parenthood and livelihood etc.
- The co-operatives should be aware of various government's programs on gender issues and work in tandem with the government to derive the benefit of such programs for their own members.
- ICA / co-operatives should organize regular forums / interactive sessions for exchange of best practices.
- ICA-AP should recognize successful women, youth and other co-operators by giving awards during ICA Assembly.

Current situation of Women in Co-operatives and Our Burning CONCERNS

- Socio-cultural barriers supported by generations of patriarchic system are too strong to be changed through awareness and persuasion.
- Women face difficulty to get elected in decision making positions because of socio-cultural and religious barriers
- Absence of supportive legal provisions in many countries
- Therefore, there is urgent need of adopting fast actions/measures.

Our all time recommendations to be acted upon by co-operative fraternity in the region

- Minimum 30% reservation of seats for women in membership, management and leadership position of the co-operatives in the region.
- ICA-AP to organize national and regional conferences and workshop to discuss legal issues/co-op laws towards gender mainstreaming, and revise the law to make women's membership easy and thereby increasing participation of women at leadership and decision making positions.

Savitri Singh addressing the conference in Gujarat

Mrs. Savitri Singh, Advisor, Gender Program of ICA-AP was invited as Guest of Honour to deliver keynote speech on the topic “Empowerment of Women Through Co-operatives”. She read out the ICA President’s message on the occasion. The theme of the message is “Investing in Women for Co-operative Success”.

Further, she spoke about need of positive discrimination by the governments and stake holders. If there are enabling policies and legal provisions in place, it will automatically create enabling environment for empowering women. The provision of 33% reservation for women in local government in India is one of the best examples to quote. In the context of ICA efforts and resolutions of Tagaytay-2006, she emphasized in her speech that there should be 33% reservation for women at all levels of co-operatives especially at leadership level. Several states in India have already introduced certain percentage of reservation for women at leadership level but Gujarat State has not introduced any such provision as yet.

The participants impressed upon the Agriculture and Co-operation Minister for reservations. He promised to look into the matter and help.

The conference provided opportunity to many village and small town women to travel to the capital city and meet up with many co-operative women from other parts of the state. It was a great platform for sharing and networking.

Initiating participation and sharing views through a platform like this is of immense value in building up better understanding about the issues and forming strategy for improvement and change.

The 53rd Session of United Nations Commission on Status of Women (UNCSD-53) was held in New York from 2-6 March, 2009.

Ms. Savitri Singh, Adviser-Gender Programme of ICA-AP, on behalf of the ICA and the Gender Equality Committee, attended opening session of the 53rd session of UN Commission on the Status of Women-2009 and high-level round-table on the theme "Equal sharing of responsibilities between women and men, including care giving in the context of HIV/AIDS". She also attended other related meetings of the event held in UN from 2-6 March, 2009

She was also invited as a panelist from ICA to speak at a side event held on Tuesday, March 3, 2009 at UN Plaza, New York.

The topic of the panel discussion was "What does equal sharing of responsibilities mean for the rural women? The Moderator of the discussion was Ms. Rosy Weiss, President of International Alliance of Women (IAW). The event was sponsored by FAO/IAW & Women's Working Group of the AD HOC GROUP of INGOs in Rome.

Other panelists were;

1. Ms. Marcela Villarreal, Director, Gender, Equity and Rural Employment Division FAO.
2. Ms. Margaret Cook, Asst. Programme Director of Soroptismist International (SI)
3. Ms. Nomusa Lauren Taylor-Dube World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts (WAGGGS)
4. Ms. Lois A Herman, Women's International League for Peace & Freedom (WILPF)

Ms. Marcela Villarreal talked about FAO programmes and initiatives. Her speech covered concerns posed by civil societies such as:

To what extent is gender a policy directive within FAO? FAO Gender proposals are being put forward what are the key components? Areas in which assistance to National Bodies is being anticipated? How might these new proposed FAO Gender modalities work especially so for International NGOs?

Ms. Savitri Singh emphasized on the need of reduction of work over load on rural women by creating infrastructure. About 50-60 % of the working time of average rural woman and girls is spent in fetching water, collecting fire wood for cooking and fodder for the cattle. Co-operatives help creating infrastructures and facilities such as water hand pumps, wells and ponds in the village.

Installation of bio fuel/ gas stoves and land grant for community level fodder development can go a long way in helping women.

These facilities will save lot of time and reduce hardship of women and young girls and in turn they will get some spare time for rest and pursuing education or recreation.

2. Fatemeh Rural Women Co-operative, Shaporgan
3. Passargad Rural Co-operative Union and its member co-operatives

The women co-operatives are running successful business of tissue paper manufacturing which is supplied to the consumer outlet run by the co-op itself. Hence, there is no much problem of marketing.

Similarly, we visited to a fresh bread making unit run by the women co-operative.

There is popular demand for the bread in the local area itself and we saw a long queue of buyers at the bakery.

Both these units manage to generate some profit and are self sustaining. The CORC supports these units (co-operatives) with funds and loans.

The women co-operative also runs a nursery school for children of the members and local residents.

We had a briefing session at the office of Passargad Rural Co-operative Union. The Managing Director of the Union informed that 5 primary co-operatives are the members of the union. The co-operative members are basically farmers and the main crops are vegetables and wheat.

We visited to cucumber and tomato farms of the members.

Students of Nursery School run by co-operative

A brief closing ceremony was held on 27 May evening in Shiraj. Mr. Khairad, Head of the Minister of Agriculture of Fars Province and other officials of the co-operative department were present. Mr. Khairad thanked the participants and the ICA for coming to Fars province. He said that it was an important event for the co-operatives of Fars Province to meet with foreign delegates and exchange information with co-operators of several countries. He spoke about women co-operatives in Iran and important role of co-operatives in socio-economic empowerment of women.

- Minimum of 30% in membership, management and leadership position of the co-operatives
- ICA-AP to organize national and regional conferences/workshop to discuss legal issues/co-op laws towards gender mainstreaming and increasing women's participation at leadership and decision making positions

International Women's Day - 8th March, 2010

“ Equal rights, equal opportunities: Progress for all”

Message by: Dame Pauline Green, ICA President and Stefania Marccone
Chair, ICA Gender Equality Committee

This year the United Nations focuses attention on the fact that the respect of women's rights and the guarantee of opportunities leads to significant advances in social and economic development. Under the theme, “Equal rights, equal opportunities: Progress for all”, International Women's Day underlines the need for governments, civil society, women's organisations, the private sector, the media, the entire UN system, and individual women and men to join forces in making important changes to policies, programmes, attitudes and behaviours to ensure that women fully participate in economic and social life.

Nearly every study that addresses the impact of women's participation in the economy concludes that gender equality is not only the right thing to do, it also makes good business sense. There are business studies showing that the higher percentage of women in decision-making positions, the more successful and efficient enterprises are. In times of economic stress, there is no business argument that can counter the value-added of investing in women. Similarly development studies over and over show that investing in women has a high return improving livelihoods, improving access to education for children and health for all, and reducing poverty in general terms, thus making an impact on overall national economic and social development.

In the co-operative movement, there are similar indications that women's participation leads to successful enterprises that fully serve the needs of all members and their families. Women are participating in co-operatives sometimes making up a very significant proportion of the membership and workforce as a recent ICA Gender Equality Committee survey is showing.

The evidence abounds for why it is in the interest of all to make women's rights and opportunities a priority and yet progress at all levels continues to be slow.

Despite this, ICA and its Gender Equality Committee wish to underline the important contribution made by the worldwide co-operative movement in creating a culture of mutual respect and its commitment to democracy and participation. All over the world, co-operatives contribute to the challenge of gender equality by implementing at various levels gender equality policies and programmes, providing co-operators with awareness-raising, training and education, and decent work. Furthermore, co-operatives are promoting this model of business to women entrepreneurs who often find that this form of enterprise allows them the flexibility and alternative management structures that they seek - an efficient business model that takes into account their specific needs and that promote their socio-economic empowerment.

More action is nonetheless required.

Co-operatives must intensify their efforts in improving gender equality in particular at this time of economic instability. Co-operative resilience can only be reinforced when programmes to ensure equal rights and equal opportunities for women and men are implemented, particularly at senior levels in our movement.

On the one side, there is continued need to review national and co-operative policies and co-operative statutes and bye-laws to ensure that these do not constrain women's access to equal opportunities including the right to own land and other property. Innovative strategies are needed to promote changes in organisational culture, rules of procedure and working methods as well as address constraints related to lack of time (work-family balance), and lack of personal security.

There is also the need for attitude changes. Too often obstacles in the form of negative stereotypes about women's leadership potential continue to limit change and progress. Specific measures to encourage and support women's participation and enable them to seek and gain senior leadership positions should be enhanced, including management and leadership training, formalised mentorship programmes and sustainable financial support.

On the 8th March 2010, International Women's Day, we call on ICA member organisations and co-operators, to review and reinforce their commitments, policies and programmes to make gender equality a reality.

Let us be leaders in assuring progress for all by taking important steps to booster women's rights and access to participation and leadership in co-operative enterprise.

Let us begin by asking all our members to ensure that from this year onwards that their representative delegations are truly gender-balanced.

International Women's Day - 8th March, 2009

"Co-operators united to end violence against women and girls"

Message by: Dame Pauline Green, ICA President and Stefania Marcone Chair, ICA Gender Equality Committee

This year again the United Nations focuses attention on the global pandemic of violence against women and girls. Under the theme, "Women and men: United to end violence against women and girls", International Women's Day underlines the need for governments, civil society, women's organisations, young people, the private sector, the media, the entire UN system, and individual women and men to join forces in putting a halt to violence against women and girls.

Violence against women is truly a global phenomenon despite that fact that many continue to believe that violence to women and girls is prevalent in only very select communities. However as World Bank data confirms, one out of every three women is likely to be beaten, coerced into sex or otherwise abused in her lifetime. The most common form of violence experienced by women globally is physical violence inflicted by an intimate partner; and women aged 15-44 are more at risk from rape and domestic violence than from cancer, motor accidents, war and malaria.

The structural causes of violence against women are rooted in discriminatory customs and traditions. Attitudes and stereotypes including the notion that domestic violence is a private and acceptable matter remain widespread, while economic discrimination of women exacerbates the perpetuation of women's subordinate status in society and this places them at an increased risk of violence.

How can these causes be addressed and by who?

Political will, commitment, investment of resources and leadership at all levels and by all are crucial. Comprehensive measures to secure gender equality and protect women's human rights are necessary for the effective prevention and elimination of all forms of violence against women. These include national gender equality action plans; legal frameworks to end impunity, protect women and allow them to equal access to resources (land, credit, etc), prevention; awareness-rising and educational measures especially involving men and boys, and the provision of services and support for victims/survivors.

The Co-operative Movement, representing more than 800 million women and men co-operators around the world, is called today to mobilise and play a stronger role to end violence against women and girls! They can do so by promoting gender equality in their own co-operative structures, but also taking a leadership in their communities to change attitudes, making political representations and ensuring that action is taken to make violence against women and girls a thing of the past.

ICA and its Gender Equality Committee wish to underline the important contribution made by the worldwide co-operative movement in creating a culture of mutual respect and its commitment to remove all forms of discrimination. All over the world, co-operatives contribute to challenge the structural causes of violence, through implementing gender equality policy and programmes, providing co-operators with awareness-rising, training and education, decent work and socio-economic empowerment for women and girls in and through co-operatives, etc. Moreover, co-operatives are also relevant actors for supporting victims with services and social inclusion opportunities.

Co-operatives can start making a difference by simply removing all obstacles that prevent or limit the direct membership and active participation of women in all types of co-operatives. This means seriously reviewing co-operative bye-laws, policies, standing orders and even internal practice to ensure that real opportunities are available to women to improve their socio-economic status and by doing so in turn contribute the success of their co-operatives while empowering themselves.

On the 8th March, 2009, International Women's Day, we call on ICA member organisations and co-operators, to further mobilise their socio-economic strength by contributing in this global struggle against all forms of violence against women and girls.

Let us aim high and be leaders of change in our societies.

International Women's Day - 8th March, 2008

" Investing in Women for Co-operative Success"

Message by: Ivano Barberini, ICA President and Stefania Marcone,
Chair, ICA Gender Equality Committee

Increasing evidence shows that gender inequality is simply bad economics. Investment in gender equality and women's empowerment is therefore vital for improving economic, social and political conditions. Further, it has a multiplier effect on productivity, efficiency and sustained economic growth according to the United Nations. It is for this reason that the 2008 theme of International Women's Day focuses on the need to invest in women and girls and calls on actions to increase resources for gender equality and women's empowerment.

Investing in women is not only a socially responsible and economically valuable, but also a necessity for co-operative organisations wishing to increase their creative and innovative abilities, essential resources to compete in the global market.

What is meant by investing in women and girls? It means not only making financial commitments to build capacity and implement gender sensitive programme and policies, but also taking a leadership role in ensuring gender equality progress. It means taking practical actions to remove barriers and create opportunities for women's empowerment and professional growth. It also means addressing the issue of young women and ensuring that they find co-operative services relevant; that they find value in joining or forming their own co-operatives and that they consider participation in co-operative democracy rewarding and worthwhile.

Educated girls contribute to increased economic productivity and improved family nutrition:

- For every year a girl goes to school beyond the fourth grade, her wages rise 20% and her family size drops by 20%
- A job given to a woman means support for the entire family
- Empowered women are agents for the common good and uplift the well-being of the human family overall
- Women who are empowered to make decisions strengthen family healthcare, reduce the spread of HIV/AIDS and promote long-lasting peace both in industrialised and developing countries.

We are reminded too that the larger youth issue is of significant importance to the success of the co-operative movement. One person in eight is a girl or young woman age 10-24 and so co-operative education for girls and young women, and gender awareness for all are essential for the continued success of the movement.

So in celebrating International Women's Day, co-operatives are called to allocate an adequate proportion of financial resources to achieve effective gender equality. They should seek additional resources for new and existing gender programmes and training for women; they should review policies and organizational capacity to empower women and keep gender balance in mind when recruiting staff and electing leadership; and they should address the issue of young women and girls and their participation in the co-operative movement.

The ICA and its Gender Equality Committee are convinced that the co-operative movement has a significant role in making investments of all types to promote gender equality and that we can make a difference. Finally, let us not forget that progress for women is progress for all.
